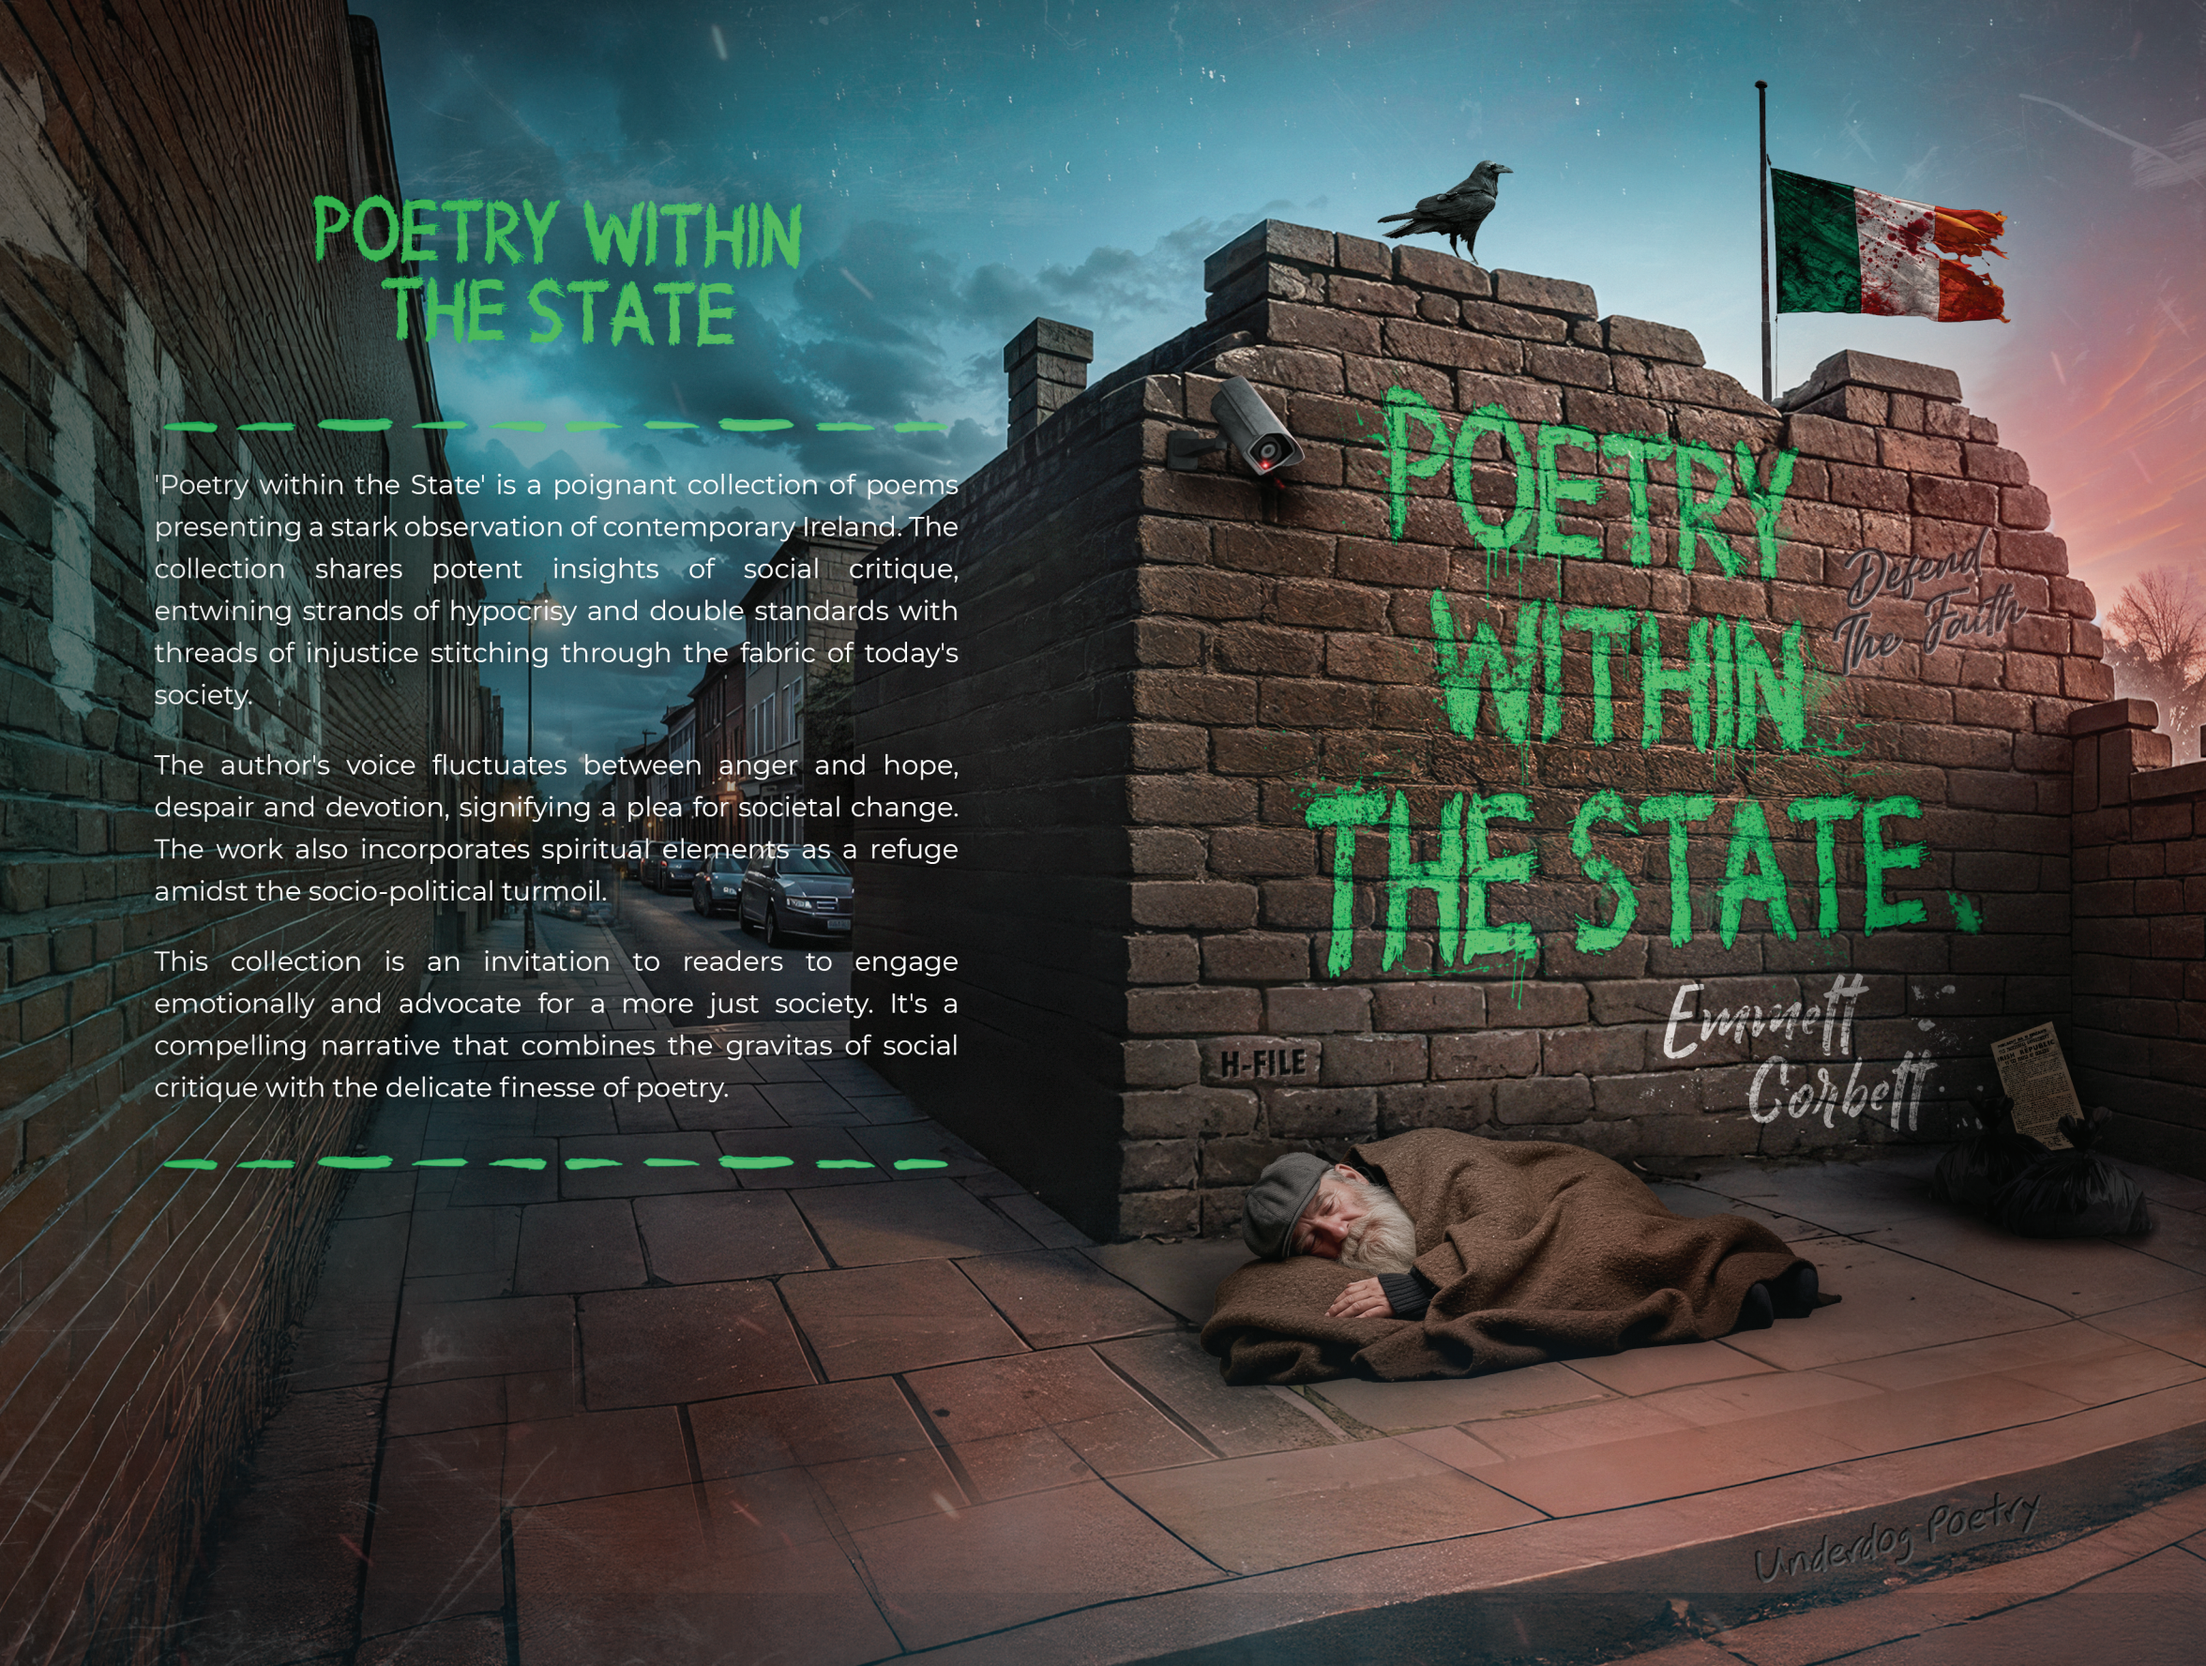
POETRY WITHIN THE STATE

'Poetry within the State' is a poignant collection of poems presenting a stark observation of contemporary Ireland. The collection shares potent insights of social critique, entwining strands of hypocrisy and double standards with threads of injustice stitching through the fabric of today's society.

The author's voice fluctuates between anger and hope, despair and devotion, signifying a plea for societal change. The work also incorporates spiritual elements as a refuge amidst the socio-political turmoil.


This collection is an invitation to readers to engage emotionally and advocate for a more just society. It's a compelling narrative that combines the gravitas of social critique with the delicate finesse of poetry.
